Rhode Island Marine Fisheries Council, Striped Bass Advisory Panel

January 17, 2012
University of Rhode Island
Graduate School of Oceanography
Coastal Institute

1. John Lake, from Rhode Island Marine Fisheries and the ASMFC Striped Bass technical committee representative gave a short presentation on Striped Bass stock status. The key points of the presentation were as follows:
  - Based on the results of the 2010 stock assessment update: Not overfished and overfishing is not occurring.
  - $F = 0.28 < F_{\text{Threshold}} 0.34$
  - $SSB = 50,548 \text{ mt} > SSB_{\text{Threshold}} 36,881 \text{ mt}$
  - Stock abundance has been declining since 2004 but remains high due to growth and maturation of 2003 year class and biomass from year classes prior to 1996.
  - Chesapeake stock appears to be lower than Hudson stock, models suggest an increasing mortality rate (M).
  - 2011 Young of the Year (YOY) Striped Bass Survey is 34.6, well above the long- term average of 11.9, and exceedingly higher than 2010's results of 5.9. This is the fourth highest measure of striped bass spawning success in the Chesapeake Bay in the survey's 58-year history.
  - Next Stock Assessment in 2013.

Further discussion revolved around the fishing productivity and opportunity of Narragansett Bay verses Rhode Island and Block Island sounds with regards to the opening of the spring season. Realizing the difficulty in keeping all groups satisfied the panel felt that a middle of the road opening was the best fit for the fishery.

Other proposals may be submitted at the RIMFC Public Hearing.
