

WHERE CAN WE GO? BOARDING KENNELS
Advice on Evacuating With Pets

From the Rhode Island Department of Environmental Management

If you cannot keep your pets with you in an emergency, consider boarding them at a kennel. Kennels that are licensed by the State of Rhode Island may accept extra pets – a small number beyond their normal capacity – when an emergency is officially declared. Since space will still be limited, though, you should phone ahead. Be sure that there is room and that you bring whatever documents (e.g., rabies certificate, veterinarian contact information), supplies, or payment the kennel may require. (Many kennels will accept pets only with proof of particular vaccinations; so keep up-to-date records of all vaccinations and bring copies with you.)

Yet longer lists of kennels are available from non-governmental sources – such as the on-line Yellow Pages for Connecticut, Massachusetts, and Rhode Island – but the State cannot vouch for their quality, licensure, or emergency capacity. Kennels, listed by town and by name below, are currently licensed to board animals in Rhode Island (2013-14).
